Understanding Culture and Race in Human Services

D. John Lee, PhD

September 14, 2010
10:00 AM - 4:00 PM

This workshop will explore the challenges of providing culturally competent and racially responsive human services. How race is negotiated varies across culture and generations. A firm distinction between culture and race will be made to facilitate honest dialogue about the dynamics of culture and race.

Cultural competency does not necessarily imply racial sensitivity, and racial awareness does not necessarily imply cultural competency. Discerning the intersections of culture and race is dependent on understanding how these constructions operate differently in our lives. Recommendations for individuals and agencies will be made to enhance both multicultural competency and racial responsiveness. A combination of storytelling, lecture, and experiential methods will be employed for safe interactive learning.

Presenter: D. John Lee, PhD, is a licensed psychologist and Coordinator of the Multi-Ethnic Counseling Center Alliance (MECCA) at Michigan State University. He has been a keynote speaker and consultant to over 200 companies, agencies, colleges, and universities throughout the United States and Canada. Dr. Lee has edited 5 books and contributed several articles to professional and scholarly journals.

Attendees of Dr. Lee's presentations say:

- ❖ Best diversity presentation I have ever heard.
- ❖ Dr. Lee goes to the core of racial and/or cultural tensions in North America.
- ❖ Fantastic! Lively and interesting.
- ❖ I learned more about race and culture than I had ever before and how it relates to me, others and the people I love.
- ❖ Quite possibly the most dynamic workshop I have ever attended.
- ❖ A unique and valuable learning experience.

NOTE: Seating is limited.
Please register early.
