LCC PROFESSORS EARN CERTIFICATION FOR SOFTWARE SECURITY Designees are among first recipients world-wide

LANSING – Lansing Community College Professors Joseph Werner and Virginia Werner of the Business, Media and Information Technologies Department (BMIT) have earned the Certified Secure Software Lifecycle Professional (CSSLP) designation.

Awarded by the International Information Systems Security Certification Consortium (ISC²) this certification integrates security requirements throughout all phases of the software lifecycle. The organization has membership of 60,000 IT professionals, in 135 countries.

“We are tremendously proud of these two individuals,” said BMIT Dean Judith Berry. “It not only demonstrates the outstanding caliber of our faculty, but also integrity of the products they produce.”

The CSSLP is a newly created certification program that emphasizes the importance of secure software development. Professors Joseph Werner and Virginia Werner are among the first recipients of this certification world-wide.
